Discover the artistic talents of the Kingdom. Thailand is known for its skilled craftsmen who blend artistic traditions with contemporary design. Discover a range of unique and beautiful products, including:

Thai Silk

Originating from the northeast, Thai silk comes in many varieties, including mudmee with its deep colors and fuzzy edged patterns. It is completely hand-made, and each piece - whether it's a top, scarf, or cushion cover - is unique.

You can check if an item is 100% Thai silk by considering its weave, sheen and print. Real silk contains natural fibers and shows small faults where the threads are joined. Also, real Thai silk shimmers and the print should only be visible on one side

Pearls

Cultured pearl production is principally found in Ranong, Phang-nga and Phuket provinces. When purchasing pearls, quality factors include size, shape, luster, nacre (the shiny iridescent coating of the pearl) thickness, color, and blemishes.

Ceramics

Among local ceramics, Benjarong is the most distinct. Its delicately detailed, geometrical patterns are decorated in five colors with gold detailing. Benjarong was once reserved for royalty; today, it is enjoyed by many as formal tableware or decorative pieces.

Lacquerware

An ancient craft, lacquerware entails a repeated process of coating structural wood with lacquer before hand painting with elaborate designs. Objects such as boxes and trays are produced in either gold and black, or yellow and green on a red-brown background.

Pewterware

An alloy of lead and tin with a smooth feel, pewter is mostly made into beakers, goblets, and tankards depicting classical mythology or scenes of rural life.

You can find all these and more at That's Siam in Jungceylon.
With nearly 200 stores, That's Siam features the best handicrafts, art objects, and souvenirs representing rich artistic traditions from all over the Kingdom.

Cearn the E
